NYC high school soccer game canceled after group of about 30 migrants refuse to leave the field — even after cops showed up

A high school soccer game at a public field in East Harlem was canceled after a group of migrants refused to leave the pitch so the kids could play.

“I directly asked them to leave and some of them kind of took it into consideration, but then four or five of them said, ‘You know what, f—k it, we don’t have to leave, we can do whatever we want,’” said Erik Johansson, the coach of the Manhattan Kickers 17-year-old boys travel team.

About 40 boys from both teams showed up on Sunday, April 14 at Thomas Jefferson Park for the 5 p.m. match.

The Kickers were set to face off against FA Euro New York.

4

A soccer match between two club teams was canceled last week when a group of supposed migrants refused to leave the field.

Travel teams in the city struggle to find available field space, according to parents and coaches.

But a group of about 30 men who appeared to be African migrants and spoke little English, wouldn't leave — even when the cops showed up.

To resolve the conflict, the cops asked to see a copy of the club team's city permit.

“When you show up with two teams in uniform, a ref and two coaches, usually nobody is asking to see your permit,” said Johansson.

By the time Johansson's assistant was able to forward a copy of the Kickers' permit, the game had been delayed 30 minutes and the teams didn't feel safe.

“Even when the game is over, you don't know if they're waiting for you, so even if the cops kicked them out, it may not be over. So we just all agreed, this is too dangerous,” Johansson said.

Weekends at Thomas Jefferson Park are busy with permitted teams and other groups competing for field time.

Helayne Seidman

In his home country of Sweden — which saw a massive influx of migrants in recent years — the clashes on the pitch were all too common.

“I have seen this before, I know how bad it can get,” he said.

Parents told him they were rattled by the incident, and don’t want to play at the field anymore. Johansson said they don’t plan to return.

Randall's Island, which sits on the other side of the Harlem River opposite Thomas Jefferson Park, was converted into shelter space for 2,000 migrants last year at the expense of the popular youth soccer fields.

Helayne Seidman

At other fields, like in East River Park, they don't have these issues — but field space in the city is limited and they take what they can get.

"It's so frustrating that the guys who refused to follow the rules won," Maud Maron, a SoHo mom whose son plays on the team, told The Post.

"That's the message the kids got."

The East Harlem field is packed with teams competing with adults for weekend time on the turf, parkgoers said. Randall's Island, which sits on the other side of the Harlem River, was converted into shelter space for 2,000 migrants last year at the expense of the popular youth soccer fields.

I don't understand why the cops didn't ask the people on the field for their permit. If folks can just show up and play, what's the point of having clubs or organizations pay for permits that allow for use of the field at specific times? They should have forced the occupying group off the field and played the game with a delay. These hands-off policies at the NYPD with migrants are creating a sense of entitlement.

The parents and league folks are scared of physical repercussions and no NYPD support, so they just cancelled the match. That's the real problem.

Actually, the real problem is that the police didn't do their job. But they were just doing what they were told by their higher-ups.

Not all fields require permits for use but permits can be issued for certain time slots. Softball fields frequently had conflicts like this back in the day, but people knew how to act. Civilization depends on civil behavior. When you ask nothing of some people, nothing is what you get.

Hochul went on the view yesterday to let us know that her parents came over here as immigrants and "we are a nation of immigrants" and all are welcome. Maybe somebody should remind her that this is not 1910 when the immigrants who landed here were just grateful to be here...loved their new home and did not ask for any special treatment or entitlements.

My great, great, great, grandfather came to the US legally on a Congress bill for work visas that allowed Chinese, Germans, Italians, and Irish immigrants to work on the railroads. The US government followed the laws more in 1800s than they do now. Food for thought.

Obama should have been stopped in 2008 but you wouldn't listen.
He brought Randall Stephens to life.

Democrats, democrats, democrats.....keep voting blue. I bet $10,000 that every single one of those parents who are democrats will not be able to bring themselves to vote for a conservative in November.

So, you keep on keepin' on, Joe Dirts. Embrace the diversity. Pretzel up your brain to somehow blame...

If you were in China where people can't vote, you can complain.

When you are in USA and having the right to elect who to lead and choose Democratic Party, it's your problem. You get what you vote for.
