The illuminati Card Game: The Full Story

Preface:

The Illuminati has great power in the United States, the pattern on the one-dollar bill is the Illuminati logo. However, after being parasitized by the devil, the Illuminati developed into a Satanic cult, slowly becoming the dark force that controls the United States, known as the Deep Government, to control the Western free world and manipulate world affairs behind the scenes.

Satanism is an underground evil cult that worships the devil Satan. Its goal is to oppose God and let the devil rule the human world. For us mortals, the devil Satan also has superhuman powers and is veryfrightening to humans.

However, the power it possesses is dark energy, which is filled with hatred and destruction towards humanity.

Its goal is to destroy the world and drag people to hell. It is said that Satanists love pedophilia and enjoy bloodshed.

They secretly rape and murder children in underground secret societies, and perform human sacrifices in certain evil rituals.

Under these rituals, they can communicate with the devil Satan, and thus, whilst under the possession of the devil, they can learn about some terrible things that will happen in the human world, or they can learn in advance about the devil's plots to manipulate and destroy humanity.

The illuminati Card Game: The Full Story

In 1995, the United States issued a set of Illuminati playing cards called "Illuminati: New World Order". This was a card game designed by Steve Jackson Games, in which players played as secret branches within the Illuminati, using means such as war, politics, and economics to create plots and ultimately control the world. It has always been considered the "truth of the Illuminati".

There are a total of 409 cards in this set of card games, and in this set of cards, a series of disasters that have occurred in human society after 1995 have been accurately prophesied, which is very eerie. For example, the 9/11 terrorist attacks, the Mexico Bay oil spill, the Japanese nuclear leak, Diana's death, the Clinton scandal, the Indonesian tsunami, and the global pandemic, etc.

This set of cards was designed by Steve Jackson Games in 1990 and published in 1995. Loyd Blankenship, one of the most famous hackers in hacking history and the publisher of the famous "Hacker Manifesto", was then employed by Steve Jackson Games and was a game partner of the company.

Just when this set of cards was designed, a very eerie thing happened: the US Secret Service suddenly broke into Loyd Blankenship's home, rummaged through his boxes and cabinets, and then broke into the Austin headquarters of Steve Jackson Games, confiscating the company's computers and destroying the scene on the pretext of capturing hackers.

In the end, with the help of the newly established Electronic Frontier Foundation, the game company sued the US Secret Service and won the case, receiving a compensation of $50,000. The set of cards was finally issued in 1995, but soon after this set of cards was issued, the issue of the cards was forced to stop, becoming a collector's item. We don't know what happened behind the scenes.

At the time, the US Secret Service's explanation to the outside world was that Lloyd Blankenship had hacked into Bell South Telecommunications in 1988 and stolen a "classified" document. It was later discovered by the public that all the contents of this so-called "classified" document could be found in a document that was publicly sold by Bell South's parent company at the time, and this document was publicly sold for $13.

The US Secret Service said that it was concerned that Lloyd Blankenship would release the "classified" document (which had long been publicly released) that he had stolen in the past, so they suddenly broke in and searched for it. The reason given by the US Secret Service looks very naive and ridiculous, and it is obviously an excuse to the outside world and a diversion of public attention.

	The real reason is conjectured to be related to the Illuminati cards. It is possible that Lloyd Blankenship hacked into the Illuminati's internal system and stole core information from the Illuminati. The set of Illuminati cards released in 1995 was designed after they had read the Illuminati's internal confidential information. Some people believe that the set of cards designed by Steve Jackson is a true reflection of the reality of the deep government conspiracy in the United States, so it was banned. As the card prophecies continue to be verified, people's doubts about the predictiveness of the cards have almost disappeared, and they are more interested in how the designer achieved the proposition of being a prophet. It is widely believed that the content of the cards comes from stolen materials, the real internal materials of the Illuminati (Satanic faction), their attempts to rule humanity, break the world order, and establish their so-called New World Order. It can be said that it is a prophecy, and it can also be said that it is a conspiracy that the devil is about to implement in the human world, and once it is successful, it becomes a prophecy.

Thus is where the term, "To play the game" comes from.

When moving into outside dimensions, time remains fundamental (as it is created by conscious evolving along a path of observation), but in order to get to those dimensions, you have to shift into other more "exotic" modes of consciousness. Our human form is modulated strictly for linear time, but consciousness, and thus the flow of time can take an almost limitless variety of modes. In the high astral and above layers, you can perceive the 4-D universe as a single object which extends from the beginning to the end of a cycle. Go even higher in consciousness and you become able to perceive the entire set of all cycles. <hr/> The Alkahest A Meta-sapient Godelian Recursion Engine.
